LEVYING TAXES.

The Time One Month Earlier Than Usual.

An Act passed at this session of the legislature and approved February 15, amends an Act to define the time for levying and assessing taxes for State and county purposes as follows:

Section 1, of the old law, is amended so as to read that "all State and county taxes required to be levied by the Boards of County Commissioners of the several counties of this State, in pursuance to the revenue laws of this State, shall hereafter be levied by such Boards of County Commissioners on or before the first Monday of March in each year."

Section 2, of the old Act, is amended so as to read: "The lien against the property upon which such taxes may be levied, as provided by such revenue laws, shall hereafter attach upon such property on the first Monday of March of each year," and Section 3, as amended, reads: "Between the first Monday of March and the first Monday of September, in each year, the county assessors of the several counties of this State shall assess all property in their respective counties, and enter such assessments in the assessment rolls of their respective counties in manner and form as prescribed by the laws of this State; provided, that taxes on the proceeds of mines and all taxes levied for municipal purposes in incorporated cities and towns shall be levied and collected in the manner heretofore provided by law."

The change in the time of levying taxes makes it obligatory on the Boards of Commissioners in the several counties to meet on or before the first Monday in March. Copies of the Act, certified to by the Secretary of State, have been sent by the Controller to some of the county officers, and presumably to the Commissioners, who will have to meet a month earlier than usual to levy taxes.

Mail Lettings.

Proposals will be received at the Contract Office of the Postoffice Department, until 3 p. m. April 21, 1883, for carrying the mails of the United States upon the routes, and according to the schedules of arrival and departure specified by the Department, in the State of Nevada, from July 1, 1883, to June 30, 1886. List of routes, with schedules of arrivals and departures, instructions to bidders, with forms for contracts and bonds and all other necessary information, will be furnished upon application to the Second Assistant Postmaster General.

The Governor on Railroads.

The following communication was Monday received by the Senate from Governor Adams. As will be perceived, it smacks of Democratic conventions and Bourbon resolutions unfilled:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
GOVERNOR'S OFFICE,
CARSON, February 25, 1883.

To the Honorable, the Senate: I beg leave to again invite your attention to the importance of the passage of some law for the regulation of fares and freights on railroads. I fully recognize the fact that the people are, and for a long time have been, earnestly urging their chosen representatives to grant them some relief from the high rates of tariff imposed by the railroad companies of our State. Not only have the evil of these high rates been evidenced by memorials and joint resolutions of previous Legislatures, but the sentiments of the people for years have found emphatic expression and been unmistakably enunciated through their chosen conventions irrespective of party. I am impressed with the belief that your honorable body is desirous of complying with their wishes, but differ as to the proper methods to effect the end in view.

Believing it to be the duty of each branch of the Government entrusted with the law-making power of the State, to give heed to the voices of the people, and to aid in every legitimate manner the enforcement of their just demands, and being desirous that before your final adjournment some measure for their relief may be devised which shall be just and fair to all, I have deemed it my duty, in accordance with my pledges to them, to urge upon you the necessity of, and to aid if possible in, relieving them from the burdens of unjust transportation charges, by making some suggestion which may possibly tend to that end.

I am aware that many force difficulties arising which might jeopardize the interests of the people by raising the charges on transporting the necessities of life, if a law is enacted regulating freight charges by a fixed maximum, especially if placed at a low rate, but in view of the fact that there is a law, now in force, requiring all railroad companies now operating in this State to keep posted, in a public place at their depots, a classified schedule of rates charged for freights, I respectfully suggest for your consideration the propriety of enacting a law based upon these schedules, making a reduction of a certain per cent. on such class of freight rates therein specified from the amount charged on a certain date. In my opinion such a measure would afford some, at least, of the much-needed relief, without dealing unjustly with the railroad corporations.

I submit the foregoing suggestions to your honorable body, trusting the present Legislature will not close its labors without adopting some beneficent measure looking to an equitable reduction of fares and freights.

This communication would have been made to your honorable body at an earlier date had not other measures seeking to accomplish the same result in a different manner remained under consideration by you and undisturbed until Saturday, the 24th instant.

J. W. ADAMS, Governor.

State Money.

The Board of Examiners counted the money and vouchers in the State Treasury, on the 20th of February, and found $261,229 45 in coin and $43,816 48 in paid vouchers, not returned to Controller; also the $380,000 Bond, $140,000 in State Bonds, and $100,000 in United State Bonds. The country is safe.

Home Again.

Mrs. Peleg Brown returned to her home last Saturday, having been discharged from Dr. Clark's Asylum at Stockton. So the JOURNAL yesterday morning was wrong in still believing her an inmate. Glad to know her reason has resumed its sway.

Mrs. Burrell, a dwarf who has been on exhibition in New York City, died last Saturday night. Very few curiosities attracted so much attention or traveled as much. She was exhibited with her little son, the child that never was born. Her mother was of ordinary size, but her father was only thirty-nine inches high. Mrs. Burrell's child was only thirty-nine inches high. Mrs. Burrell was one of the few cases in which the Cesarean operation has been successful.

JOHNSON GRASS.

Profitable Feed for Milk or Beef Cattle.

W. A. Sanders of Fresno, Cal., discussing the utility of "Johnson grass," gives the Rural Press the following information: Johnson grass is a variety of Sorghum Halapense; was introduced into the United States from Australia 40 years ago, by Governor Davis, of South Carolina, and was raised extensively in that State before the civil war by two brothers by the name of Means, hence the name "Means grass." A few years before the war seed was taken from the Means farm, by Mr. Johnson, a wealthy planter of central Alabama, and was sown by him on his farm in Dallas county, near Selma. After the war it was found that the grass had taken entire possession of this farm and portions of those surrounding it. The farm in its "ruined condition" was rented to B. F. Fort, a resident of the locality, who soon turned it over to its present occupant, Herbert Post, a northern man of skill and enterprise. But I will let a competent gentleman, who has spent considerable time in the locality, give his account of it. J. A. McCrary of Home and Farm, writing from Marion Junction, Ala., says:

"This is the famous Johnson grass district of Alabama. It is more limited than many suppose it to be; an area of 30 miles would about cover it all, Marion Junction being the headquarters, though there are some few spots of it in other parts of the State. It is the Guinea (?) grass; was brought here (I suppose about 30 years ago), by a gentleman by the name of Johnson (thus its name), and planted first in his garden, thence to a grazing lot. The consequence was that the grass soon took forcible possession of his farm, and from the scattering of seed by natural causes it commenced to spread on the farms in the surrounding country, and the general cry was 'Ruin, ruin!' Farmers commenced to fight it, but the more they fought the stronger it got. Some very small spots have been eradicated, but I have never seen a field yet, where it got a good hold, that it ever was destroyed. It was considered one of the greatest pests that ever got upon our lands.

After it was decided to be impossible ever to destroy it, the farmers generally accepted the overtures of Mr. Johnson's grass, and went to work to propagate and utilize it. It grows either from the seed or roots; best, quickest and strongest from the roots, which are about as small as cane roots; are not killed or injured by the coldest winters we have here; and permeate the stiffest prairie lands to the depth of about eighteen inches. The seed are about as the Innu or Chinese sugar millet seed; takes about three pecks to seed an acre well. Is quite a feeble grass the first year from the seed, very easily killed down to the ground by frost, though the roots are never killed by frost or freezes in this climate. Very excellent summer grazing; stock leave all other grass and go for it. A good fattening, or milk and butter-producing grass. Wants a deep, rich soil. A very coarse grass; grows from two to six feet high, blades broad and very rough, stems large, though soft and succulent. Will produce three crops of hay from the first of June to the first of November, and from two to five tons per acre after being well set.

The hay is not yet very marketable, having a coarse, uncomely appearance—its real merits are not generally known. During the Winter of 1878, Robinson was through our country with his great show. His forage master told me that on sight of the Johnson grass hay he would have rejected it if he could have possibly procured any other; but to his great astonishment, he found it to be the finest forage that he had ever been able to procure in the South. We keep our work stock on it for months, during the Fall and Winter seasons, with but very little grain to assist, and they keep in very good condition. A plenty of it will almost sustain mules to do good plowing without any grain. Instead of a pest, it is proving itself to be a great blessing to the country. It is forcing the farmers to do that which they never would have done by their own will. It is the cause of working a great revolution in the agriculture of this immediate locality. Cotton is gradually being left off. Mowers, rakes, harrows, cultivators, pulverizers, thrashers, hay presses, etc., are being brought into use. Thoroughbred live stock are being brought and brought into the country to raise from, and common ones to consume the outs and grass and fatten for market, shipping some to the Mobile and New Orleans markets. The worthless negro labor, to a great extent, is being dispensed with by many, and we begin to feel that a brighter day is now commencing to dawn upon us.

I would gladly leave this subject here, but were I to do so, I know it would bring me a hundred letters asking, "What is the difference between Johnson grass and evergreen millet?" So I will try to answer the question. They are as near alike as Sonora wheat and club wheat are; or as white flint and white dent corn are; or as broom corn and sorghum cane are. A standard authority on Johnson grass says of it: "Standing water upon the land is death to the grass if it remains very long." This statement would be wholly false respecting the evergreen millet, as dozens of persons in our State can testify.

Mr. McCrary says the Johnson grass roots penetrate the earth to a depth of 18 inches. The evergreen millet roots reach four times that depth. Of Johnson grass one bushel, 28 lbs., of seed are required for an acre; of evergreen millet one-fourth of that quantity is a great abundance. The Johnson grass is very coarse and is not a very leafy grass; the evergreen millet here on my farm grows only half as tall as the Johnson grass, and is very leafy. The Johnson grass can be eradicated; the evergreen millet can not be eradicated. The Johnson grass yields 500 to 800 lbs. of seed per acre; the evergreen millet yielded here on my farm last year at the rate of two and one-half tons of seed per acre.

But, says somebody, "Aren't those mere temporary differences, caused by the Johnson grass having grown for the past 40 years in the moist clays of the Southern States, while the newly-introduced evergreen millet is now, as the Johnson grass was 40 years ago, adapted to growth in a semi-desert region? and won't they become the identical same thing under the identical same conditions here in our State?" I answer, I don't know. One fact points to such a conclusion: Mr. Giddings of Tulare county procured a start of evergreen millet from me, and on his place last Summer, where he let it go to seed, it was nine feet tall, and as coarse as I ever saw the Johnson grass. Time alone can answer the question of their comparative value, differences or identity, when future crops shall be raised from seed of each variety, produced here in our own State.
